

Peter Patter: Difficult customers

Cerberus : Grrr... Gr...!!!

Peter Patter: Good dog, good dog... Look at this catalogue!
Every dog's dream can be found here. For example, look, there's a bone, a genuine full size copy of a cow's leg. It's delicious to chew and everlasting.

Cerberus : Grrr... !!! Grrr... !!!!!

Peter Patter: No? You don't like it? Then look at these lovely balls!
Each one a different colour, in unbreakable plastic. You don't find balls like these everyday! You don't like that either? Hey, calm down! I hope your don't use these big teeth to bite nice commercial travellers!!

Lady Snooty : Don't be frightened, my good man. Everybody thinks that my dogs look fierce, but they are quite gentle. Oh, what's that? You have a shop on wheels? How unusual!

Peter Patter: The van is only for samples. You'll find everything you want in these catalogues.

Peter Patter: For example, here is something really essential: these wonderful extending forks for your parties. They are very useful when the buffet table is crowded: each guest can reach the food.

Lady Snooty : How interesting. Are they silver? I have been looking everywhere for new silver cutlery.

Peter Patter: Silver? Let's check in the catalogue. Every item of cutlery is available in...

Lord Snooty : Adelaide! Don't waste money on these ridiculous gadgets. Mr Patter, you claim to have something for everyone, so show me those cigars that I can see in your van.

Peter Patter: Do not despair...

Peter Patter is trying to sell things to the people in the manor house. They are: Lady Snooty and her brother Lord Snooty, Annabel and Joseph, their grand-nephews, Ivy, the maid and Simon, Lady Snooty's cousin, who is a novelist. Peter Patter addresses each of them in turn.
