

Sophie is so charming! : The usual bouquet

Sophie : Hello, Professor Fisher! How are you?
Prof Fisher: Very well, thank you, Miss Sophie. Do you remember, it's my wife's birthday today! I would be so disappointed if you had forgotten.
Sophie : Oh yes! Of course! So, you would like the usual bouquet?
Prof Fisher: Yes, the usual. Nothing is quite so beautiful as red and white flowers, especially red roses. It would be so nice if you could bring them to the house with this note.

Sophie : Oh, who is that young man walking so peacefully towards the University... He looks so romantic!
Prof Fisher: Miss Sophie... you seem so far away! Are you listening?
Sophie : Oh, I'm so sorry, Professor! Of course I'm listening! So, as we were saying, the usual bouquet, I suppose?
Prof Fisher: Yes, and it would be so helpful if you could bring them to the house this afternoon ... But you have to stay in the shop, so it may not be possible...
Sophie : Oh, it's not so difficult!
Prof Fisher: That is so kind of you! I wish you good day, my dear Sophie.
Sophie : Good day to you too, professor!

Oh, the young man walked so near to me! And I think he looked at me... It's so sad that he doesn't need any flowers! He is so handsome! Oh well, perhaps he will come back this way later ... So, if I sell ten more bouquets, I will deliver the professor's bouquet and I can go and walk in the park! The sun is shining so brightly today!

Sophie is so charming!: How romantic!

Mme Esturgeon : Ah! It's you, Sophie! I was so busy I didn't hear the doorbell. Oh! What a pretty bouquet! These roses are so beautiful! So he remembered as he always does. And the little card... yes, he writes the same thing every year, so I know he still loves me a little!

Sophie : Oh yes, Mrs Fish, it's, so romantic!

Yes, there's nothing quite so touching as these old couples who still love each other so tenderly after all these years!

Pity that young man who was so charming didn't walk past my shop again ... ah well! So now I can go to the park! Who knows, I might meet the man of my dreams there. It would be so wonderful!
